

S Corporation Engagement

Taxes solved.

Thank you for using Tucson Tax Team for your tax preparation needs. Clear communication is key to a successful business relationship. The purpose of this letter is to ensure sure we share an understanding of the services we provide.

Our Responsibilities: Our responsibility is to accurately prepare your Federal and State Corporation income tax returns including all supporting schedules. We are not responsible for the preparation of other business taxes such as state use tax, payroll tax, etc. We will complete income tax returns using the information you provide to us. Although we may ask for explanations regarding certain items, we will not audit or verify any information. If we encounter a situation in which the tax laws are unclear, we will advise you of it and use our professional judgment as to the correct handling of the situation. Our work in connection with the preparation of your Form 1120S filing does not include any procedures designed to discover defalcations or other irregularities, should any exist. Information you provide will be kept confidential but is not protected from the IRS. We cannot disregard the implications of any information you provide in the process of preparing the return. Your returns are subject to review by taxing authorities. Should an examination occur, we are available to represent you at an additional fee. Any additional tax, penalties or interest assessed are your responsibility.

Fees and Deadlines: Our fees are based upon the complexity of the tax return and the completeness of information you provide. S Corp returns are due on March 15th but may be extended until September 15th.

Income: The IRS requires you to report all income received in a trade or business including bartering, cancelled debt, kickbacks, etc. The IRS receives income information from merchant cards and may test to make sure you are reporting all your income based on credit card sales reported.

Losses: The amount of loss each shareholder can take on their personal tax return is limited to that shareholder's investment in the S Corp. It is each shareholder's responsibility to maintain and keep a record of their basis.

Bookkeeping: The IRS places a higher burden of responsibility on business entities. It is important that you have proper bookkeeping procedures in place to support the income/expenses claimed on the business tax return. In most cases, you should be able to produce a year-end balance sheet; this is one of the first items requested in an audit. If you provide your own bookkeeping, we highly recommend that you have your books reviewed by a professional bookkeeper before you provide us with a P&L and balance sheet.

Deductions: A 2% or higher shareholder must include the cost of premiums paid by the S Corp as wage income if the S Corp deducts the premiums. Mileage from a non-company vehicle is subject to reimbursement from an accountable plan in order to be deductible. 50% of the cost of business-related meals is deductible. 50% of meals just for yourself are deductible only if you are away from your tax home. Meal expenses must be documented with the date, the client or associate, and the purpose of the meal. Travel is deductible if you can demonstrate a substantial business purpose. These expenses may include ground/air transportation, lodging, meals as described above, incidental expenses. If your travel is mixed business and personal, your deduction may be limited. In order to deduct expenses that the shareholder and employees pay personally, the S Corp must have a written accountable plan that states how and when employees will be reimbursed for expenses that are paid outside the S Corp. All employees must follow the plan's guidelines.

Employees and Contract Labor: The S Corp is required to pay reasonable compensation in the form of wages to all shareholders who provide a service to the corporation. If the IRS determines that compensation was inadequate, they may re-categorize some or all of the S Corp profits as wages; in that case, the S Corp is responsible for all penalties and interest for late-filed payroll taxes and reports. W-2s must be provided to employees by January 31st. Independent contractors need not have payroll taxes withheld; you must file Forms 1096/1099-MISC by February 1st for any contractor you paid more than $600.

Your Responsibilities: Your responsibility is to provide us with all the information needed to prepare your return. You need to keep substantiation documentation for the income and expenses that you are claiming on your return in the event such items are requested by a taxing authority. These records include income statements, bank and credit card statements, travel expenses, business mileage, business utilities, home utilities and other expenses for an office in home. You may be asked to prove that your expenses were reasonable and necessary; excessive or inappropriate expenses may be disallowed.

You are responsible for keeping personal and business funds separated; personal expenses should not be paid from the business account and vice versa.

Because an S Corporation is an entity whose tax attributes generally flow through to its shareholders, the penalty for substantial understatement of tax relating to S Corporations items may be imposed at either the corporate or shareholder level. Management is responsible for the proper recording of transactions in the books of accounts, for the safeguarding of assets, and for the substantial accuracy of the financial records. You have the final responsibility for the income tax returns; review them carefully before you sign them.
